

The Boston Globe

Boston, MA

The Boston Globe
boston.com/sidekick

January 11, 2008

TASTEMAKERS TALK

We've asked, they've told. Today we check in with the folks behind the scenes to see what they're up to for the weekend for the last time. By Liza Weisstuch

Curtis Kemeny

CEO and President of Boston Residential Group

The experts tell us it's important to love your work. What better way to demonstrate commitment to your product than to live in it? Kemeny's dwelling is a penthouse at 360 Newbury, the building Boston Residential Group recently finished at the Mass Ave. end of Newbury Street. Tonight, as usual, he'll cook dinner for his girlfriend, Alice, and her two children. Tomorrow starts in high gear with a spinning class at Equinox before he checks the progress of construction at 285 Columbus Lofts, BRG's project slated for completion in April.

He and Alice typically scoot to the mountains for winter sports when there's snow and to his Martha's Vineyard house in the summer, but while in Boston this weekend, they'll drop by some of their South End favorites — like Myers & Chang and The Beehive — tomorrow night, "date night." Kemeny says Sunday is "rest day," but with intentions to work on plans for the next deal; rest is relative.

Sidekick